

Girl with Gloves

by Tamara de Lempicka

The intimate French Fusion restaurant known as Tamara at The National Hotel takes its name from the unique work of art overlooking the dining room. Hand-crafted from Italian glass tiles, the mosaic captures the grace and elegance of Art Deco style as expressed by the period's foremost portraitist, Tamara de Lempicka.

The artist was born in Poland but most of her painting was done in Paris in the 1920's and 30's. Dubbed La Belle Polonaise for her Greta Garbo looks, she was a glamorous figure in Bohemian Montparnasse, whose famous cafes were magnets for the artistic, literary and intellectual elite. Her friend Jean Cocteau said of her, "She loved art and high society in equal measure."

It was society's most fashionable who made their way to Tamara's studio to sit for her portraits. Her women subjects in particular seized the attention of the art world. Their sensuous curves set against angular constructions seemed to leap from the canvas with a psychological and physical intensity. Rumors of erotic liaisons with her models added to the allure of her paintings.

So who is the demure and seductive Girl with Gloves? Tamara didn't say.
